

HireScores.com is the site dedicated to providing independent information and real life feedback on all aspects of recruitment – serving the needs of candidates, recruiters and hiring companies

Finding your way around the job market has never been easy. A good recruitment firm can help, but choosing the right one could mean the difference between finding the perfect candidate and spending months fruitlessly searching. However, unlike just about every other industry, candid feedback on which recruitment firms perform the best is very thin on the ground.

Stepping in to fill that need, HireScores.com is a brand new website, that invites candidates and employers (HR and Line Management) to rate their experience of recruitment firms and provide feedback – both good and bad. These ratings are then displayed on-line (and available in more detail in confidential reports), giving job seekers and employers a picture of the best recruitment firms – and the ones to avoid.

With over 20 years of experience in senior HR and recruitment roles, site founder, Lisette Howlett believes that providing this information is a natural step.

“It seems strange to think that you can rate hotels, CDs, books, restaurants, but to date there’s been no open way for job seekers (or employers) to rate the recruitment industry. HireScores.com does just that and gives everyone involved in recruitment access to useful information and real life experiences, in a simple and independent format.”

Access to information is the guiding principle behind HireScores.com. “With the right information, recruiters can improve their services and demonstrate their successes and candidates are empowered to find the right recruiters and ultimately the best job for them. Just as importantly employers are able to get unique insights into the candidate experience and its impact on their employer brand. With this in mind we also facilitate 360° feedback for employers in the recruitment area leading to higher success rates, cost effective and better recruitment and retention.

HireScores.com: what you need to know

HireScores.com invites job seekers and employers to rate their experiences, both good and bad, of the services provided by recruitment companies.

The aggregate results are then displayed online, so that:

- Job seekers get the information they need to find the best recruiters for them,
- Employers can learn more about their recruitment partners, and
- Quality recruiters learn about the needs of their candidates and clients and distinguish themselves in the market place.

The site also provides free resources, tools and practical information to help job seekers, employers and recruiters and seeks to build a community for people involved in recruitment to increase dialogue leading to better recruitment.

Employers: access a wide range of services

- Free advice and support with setting up systems to facilitate feedback on your recruitment partners by candidates.
- A premium registration which allows enhanced services including a bespoke rating page for your HR team and Line Management, additional questions, comparisons with other companies, evaluation on internal processes, additional reports, etc.
- A market intelligence option (strictly confidential) allowing you to gain feedback from candidates on yourself as a recruiter and also to compare results with other companies.
- The ability to invite feedback (in strict confidence) from your recruitment partners.

Plus a wide range of resources: recruitment diagnostic, talent diagnostic, articles and information, psychometrics, and much more. Visit us at www.HireScores.com
